STREET SMARTS

PRESENTED BY

PROJECT SAFE NEIGHBORHOODS

Street Smarts

The U.S. Attorney General has made fighting gun and gang violence a top national priority. In Rhode Island, the U.S. Attorney's Office has created a program called Street Smarts.

Street Smarts is a preventive effort geared toward middle and high school students. It begins with an interactive PowerPoint presentation by Assistant United States Attorney Richard Rose. Mr. Rose presents a history of street gangs in Rhode Island, tells of real-life prosecutions and tough federal sentences and attempts to debunk myths about gang life. He also contrasts the fate of gangsters with positive stories about community role models. The presentation brings a local perspective that is insightful, humorous and blunt.

"We have lost our capacity to be shocked. We too easily accept the murders of our children. We only speak out when the number of deaths really shocks our conscience, and even then for only so long. Enough is enough. We must lead our youth back from the abyss. We have to give them an opportunity to live and grow so that choosing violence won't be so easy or so attractive. Street Smarts is a first step."
